ACCESS to CARE

Message from the CEO

“Vulnerable members of our community, particularly immigrants and those from diverse backgrounds, need our support.”

Virginia Garcia Memorial Health Center exists today because of the work that began 44 years ago by a handful of dedicated and driven community leaders who said, “¡Si se puede!” and believed that everyone, even migrant farmworkers, deserved health care.

Our founders took their passion for health care for everyone and turned it into a reality following Virginia’s tragic death. Within weeks of her passing, we were delivering critical care in a 3-car garage in Cornelius, removing barriers to health care for those who needed it most.

We are no longer in that garage: we are in 17 care sites, and a brand-new mobile clinic, employing more than 600 passionate, mission-driven employees, and our mission is the same. Our passion for our community remains the same.

In the following pages you will find stories of inspiration and hope that took place within the clinics of Virginia Garcia. You will hear about the young boy that came to the Beaverton Wellness Center with an infection in his foot that nearly cost him his life. You will learn about the groundbreaking work being done to address the opioid crisis through Medication Assisted Treatment, and you will hear about the team of dentists that works every day to ensure our youngest patients are receiving the dental care they need to thrive.

Virginia Garcia will continue to look beyond the exam room for new ways to ensure our patients have access to high-quality, culturally relevant care.

Vulnerable members of our community, particularly immigrants and those from diverse backgrounds, need our support. We’re proud to provide a welcoming health care home here at Virginia Garcia and hope you enjoy all of the stories and highlights of this past year contained in our annual report.

Gil Muñoz, CEO

A Modern Day Virginia Garcia

Hilder is a quiet, charismatic 11-year-old with a cute dimpled smile that betrays nothing about the incredible journey he and his mother, Ventura, took before they arrived at Virginia Garcia's Beaverton Wellness Center.

His mother, 7 months pregnant, arrived in Texas, carrying her 10-year-old son on her back. Hilder had a serious infection in his foot and was feverish. Doctors in Honduras told her he would die unless it was amputated, but Ventura knew medical care in the U.S. could save him so she started walking.

When border patrol saw his swollen, ulcerated foot, they immediately took him to a hospital where doctors operated and saved the boy's foot. Just three days later, they sent the pair to Oregon to live with family, but the injury needed additional care. With no insurance and no knowledge of the health care system, they arrived late in the evening at the Beaverton Wellness Center on the advice of a family member.

Dr. Jason Soh and his team cleaned the wound, referred him to a specialist, ensured the family understood his prescriptions and had the ability to refill them as needed. They also helped his family sign up for health insurance and connected Hilder to the Beaverton School District, where he is currently a healthy fifth-grader.

Roughly 2,500 children were separated from their parents at the U.S. border in 2019. Hilder's injury likely saved him from that fate.

Addressing the Opioid Crisis

As the opioid crisis began to unravel across the United States, the communities Virginia Garcia serves were not immune.

Our Medication Assisted Treatment (MAT) program offers wrap-around services for our patients suffering from opioid use disorder. We provide Suboxone as a maintenance treatment medication to patients after they have completed an offsite addiction treatment program. They work with our behavioral health providers in the MAT program too.

"My time with patients is used to focus on their recovery by normalizing cravings and reminding patients to use coping skills they may already have to mitigate cravings," said Ingrid Solares, behavioral health provider. "I like to focus on the 'what now' of recovery and work through some of the shame patients may feel about their history of substance use."

MAT patients also have access to all of our medical, dental and wellness programs.

Christine* was addicted to heroin and had been through other treatment programs before a friend told her about Virginia Garcia. "I am thrilled with the program," she said. "Dr. Carden is so non-judgmental, and you guys also treat overall health, which is so important and something I've never found in other treatment programs."

Virginia Garcia
was the 1st health care center to offer
Medication Assisted Treatment to Medicaid patients in Washington County.

Helping Our Youngest Patients

Our School-Based Health Centers (SBHC) are often the entry point into health care for new immigrant families as they navigate the complicated requirements of enrolling their children in school.

"We see many children who are unable to attend school until they are vaccinated," said Tera Roberts, SBHC Associate Medical Director. "They show up needing 7-9 immunizations to enroll."

Navigating the U.S. health care system is difficult for people who speak English. Now imagine trying to understand the complexities when you come from another country and speak a different language. Our young School-Based Health Center patients and their families speak 28 different languages, from Swahili and Punjabi to Chinese and Spanish.

Using an on-site interpreter, we take the time to explain to parents the health care needs of their children in their native language. We also talk about the emotional and mental health challenges that their children face when transitioning into a new culture.

"Among the families we served last year was a father of two young children from Guatemala who had to leave his wife and other children behind," shared Tera Roberts. "He profusely thanked us for being here and caring so deeply for the struggles of his newly immigrated family. This scenario happens weekly and our support staff work hard to serve everyone."

Employees RISE With Virginia Garcia

Lucia Garcia-Martinez thrives on making a difference. Every day in her work as a Virginia Garcia Community Health Outreach Worker, she connects patients to resources in the community.

Recently, Lucia decided to take her commitment one step further by joining Virginia Garcia's RISE program. RISE – Reach. Inspire. Support. Engage. – is a civic engagement program for Virginia Garcia's employees so that they have the skills and confidence to pursue civic leadership positions. Area civic leaders serve as coaches and mentors to the participants.

"RISE helped me focus on ways to be more involved in my community, and my mentor helped me learn how local government works," Lucia said.

Lucia graduated from RISE and within a month was appointed to the City of Cornelius Planning Commission. She is the first Latinx community member to serve on the Planning Commission.

RISE is creating a new generation of leaders, like Lucia. Most participants in the RISE program are new to civic engagement. Through RISE they learn interview and public speaking skills. They learn how decisions are made and become more confident in their place at the table. They find their voice. Our employees witness the barriers that our patients face daily and understand them because of their own lived experiences facing those same barriers. RISE helps them to amplify their voices and the voices of our patients in the policy arena.

Lucia joined the Planning Commission at a very busy time. "I'm learning how to ask the right questions and what it takes to become an effective advocate," she said.

of the first RISE graduating class

Meeting our Patients Where they Live and Work

Virginia Garcia's medical and dental teams got to put our new mobile clinic into service as we returned to local migrant camps in June 2019. For many camp patients, their visit with Virginia Garcia is the only time they receive care for their medical and dental concerns.

This year our providers assisted 22-year-old Lupe*, who travels with her family to Oregon to work in the fields. She is a yearly patient for Dr. Eva Galvez, who has seen patients at the camps for nine years. This year, Lupe visited the mobile clinic because of severe abdominal pain over the past 12 months.

"She worried it was cancer," Dr. Galvez said. "She told me that cancer would be devastating as she is the oldest of her siblings and feels responsible for their well-being. She also disclosed that her father, an alcoholic, is emotionally and verbally abusive and her mother is often withdrawn."

Tests showed no physical problems, but Dr. Galvez suspected Lupe's symptoms were connected to her psychological stress. "We made a plan to meet with behavioral health providers during her stay in the area."

"At her final visit with me, she expressed hope regarding her future," Dr. Galvez said. "I believe the first step in healing is feeling cared for, listened to, and validated."

Connecting Healthy Outcomes to a Healthy Mouth

Our dental sealant team visited 21 schools in Washington County last year and screened 2,000 children for dental problems. During one of their visits, school staff alerted the team to a young boy who was not eating because it appeared he was unable to chew his food, licking an apple instead of biting into it.

The boy, who was developmentally delayed and non-verbal, couldn't tell anyone about his dental pain, but our dental staff saw severe swelling on one side of his face and knew the boy was suffering. Working with school staff, they got parental consent to check the boy and were able to assess his teeth and perform a cleaning.

The boy had 17 teeth out of 24 that needed dental work.

Our dental team rallied around the boy, working diligently with everyone to ensure he received Medicaid coverage and an appointment at a pediatric hospital where his treatment could be completed all at once. The next time they saw him, his teeth were repaired, and he was smiling bigger than ever. He also received a new pair of eyeglasses, all as a result of his initial in-school dental visit.

"Our highly committed dental sealant team is dedicated to going above and beyond for kids," said Kyle Allen, School-Based Health Center dental manager.

Virginia Garcia's
dental sealant program screened
2,000 children at
21 schools

and provided sealants to
1,339 students

for a total of
4,612

Dentist Leads the Way for Future DREAMers

When he was 8 years old, Eddie Ramirez pulled on a dental mask and gloves and helped his aunt, a dentist in Mexico, work on a patient.

"I was in charge of cleaning the spit bowl," he said. Even so, Eddie found dental work fascinating. "I fell in love with it."

Twenty years later, after overcoming what many would consider insurmountable obstacles; Eddie became Virginia Garcia's first Latinx dentist.

"I love the philosophy and the population at Virginia Garcia," he said. "It connected with my upbringing. The struggles of our patients and communities are mine. I wanted to continue to be part of that effort and help in other aspects beyond dentistry, including advocacy. I knew Virginia Garcia would give me that opportunity."

Eddie is one of at least 700,000 Deferred Action Childhood Arrival (DACA) recipients across the nation. His parents brought him to the U.S. when he was very young. He compares his struggles to become a dentist with those of his patients.

"Being an undocumented clinician is rare, and the journey I went through to get here is sometimes the same journey our patients go through just to get to the dental chair," he said.

Moving Forward with Hope

We partnered with the Oregon Muslim Medical Association (OMMA) to open a mental health clinic serving Muslim refugee families once a month at our Beaverton Wellness Center.

Psychiatrist Dr. Omar Reda directs the program. Dr. Reda is a leading expert in psychotraumatology, therapy that focuses on PTSD, Trauma-Informed Care, as well as the mental health of Muslims, immigrants and refugees. Dr. Reda's program titled "Untangled" focuses on tackling the family dysfunction and youth vulnerability resulting from trauma.

We truly believe in the mission of Virginia Garcia, and it aligns with our own mission," said Nura Elmagbari, OMMA office manager. "Everyone feels welcome here. It's been very easy and pleasant to work with Virginia Garcia."

Most of the families OMMA serves are refugees who come from various war-torn countries. They have lost family members, lived through combat, and suffered abuse. They experience far higher rates of stress, depression and PTSD compared to the general population, and symptoms can last for years after a person is resettled. This is especially true for refugee children.

OMMA and Virginia Garcia are working together to help these families move forward with hope.

Oregon

Helping Others Change Their Lives

For many patients, managing a chronic condition like diabetes can seem overwhelming. You need to exercise, watch your diet, track your blood pressure, and understand how to take your medication. You have to change your lifestyle.

This is where Alison Reta steps in. She's a clinical pharmacist at Virginia Garcia's Beaverton Wellness Center.

"As clinical pharmacists, we do much more than dispense medication," Alison said. "We talk to each patient at length. We look comprehensively at their lifestyle, at challenges or barriers to managing their health. We help our patients develop short- and long-term goals."

Virginia Garcia includes a clinical pharmacy program at every primary care clinic. Clinical pharmacists like Alison are co-located to support all primary care teams. That support can range from simple reminders to refrigerate medication to complex instructions on glucose meter testing, insulin injection techniques and proper use of inhalers.

The clinical pharmacy team uses a technique called "teach back" — asking patients to explain what they have learned about their condition, about their medication, and the effects of diet and lifestyle. For patients with literacy challenges, they draw pictures and diagrams.

"We have shifted the power of knowledge to our patients so they have the problem-solving tools to help themselves feel better; that's what I consider success."

— Alison Reta, clinical pharmacist,
Beaverton Wellness Center
